Now is my favorite time of the year to be in the flower business. Right now so much of our designs are intuitive. It is so easy to pull a small piece of nature from outside and simply work around it. The seasonal colors and textures are so expressive they give an increased sense of time and place. Whether it is the last of the summer perennials or late season hydrangeas that have the muted colors of a great summer just gone by, creating autumn floral art captures the true essence of a day in a busy flower shop.
